

MISSING MIND

11.17.80

Thoughts of anger and frustration caught in a vice like grip... anticipation of desperation blind following the blind into the ditch i trip...
40 days and 40 nights lost in the wilderness at the back of my mind fervently searching for that which i've left behind that which was bequeathed to me and undeniably mine for even the prodigal did return in time his true purpose to find ~~the seeker of a sign~~ I am the seeker after the same sign sense of self i seek to define toward the prodigal allegory i now incline for you see i've lost my mind yes, i've lost my mind

yet i seek to find - to this regard

~~the thought~~ my past i rewind as to that part of me - a pow ^{of the} babylonian captivity desperately needing to see repatriation of what i used to be if the sum doth equate to the whole then to be whole is my geometric goal as capitalism steals the communal soul but in the meantime

between time

~~the thought of a sign i seek to find~~

~~the thought of a sign i seek to find~~

i exist in the sublime and wrestle with the cipher that is my dream until i find ~~my missing mind~~ the key to my missing mind

Please bring a yoga mat and a water bottle.

Optional - yoga blocks, a blanket, or a strap.